

CEA is pleased to announce the release of these new reports:

Parents' Participation in School Improvement Planning

This is a research report of a project of the former Education Improvement Commission of Ontario that provided help to ten project schools in engaging parents in school improvement planning. From data collected in the project schools, the research team built models of parent involvement in school improvement and tested them through a large survey, thus assessing the impact of parent participation in planning school improvement.

Telesat/SchoolNet Multimedia Satellite Trials Project: An action-research evaluation

This study included the development of a methodology for evaluation of the effects of providing broadband connectivity and collected base-line data in schools from three provinces (Newfoundland, Quebec and Ontario). The evaluation research is designed to provide decision makers with information about the technical and pedagogical implications of such access in schools engaged in the pilot initiative. It provides much-needed information on the benefits and role of high-speed access in terms of teaching and learning.
